When Love Keeps Truce.

It is a lonely forest dell,
With woven branches hedged about;
Red lilles guard the secret well.
And blue-cred violets peering out,
Where Love, his truce with Life to keep,
Doth lie asleep.

No voice of wind or waterfall
Around his bed of flowery moss,
Nor sudden song of birds that call
From bough to bough the glade across,
Can stir the silent spell of sleep
That Love must keep.

Yet two there are who may not dare
To tread those woodland ways again.
Lest their light footfalls wandering there
Should break the truce of bygone pain.
Lest Love, who signed himself asleep,
Should wake to weep!

Brydon—Guerrant.

To-day at noon the nuptinis of Miss Olive P. Guerrant, daughter of Mr. J. B. Guerrant, of Danville, Va., to Mr. Robert Brydon, Jr., of New York city, will be celebrated in Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church, Danville, the Rev. Graham Lambeth, the paster of the Church, performing the ceremony. Miss Dakata Guerrant will direct the music, and the wedding chorus from Lohengrin will make the processional. The decorations of the church will be in palms and forms.

Miss Lucile Murrie and Miss Lucie Brydon, sister of the groom, will be bridesmaids. They will wear white silk mull over green taffeta, white lace hats, and carry pink carnations and ferns.

Little Miss Oilve Longest, of Greensboro, N. C., a cousin of the bride, will make a charming maid of honor. She will wear a pretty frock of white China silk, accordion-plaited, and hold in her hand a basket of Illies of the valley.

The bride will come in with her brother, Mr. Earle D. Guerrant, of Atlanta, Ga. She will wear a traveling gown of mede voile, with tocque, and gloves of the same shade. Her flowers will be Bride roses, fringed with maidenhair forns.

The groom will be attended by Mr. C. C. Kent, of Nowport News, as best man. Mr. Brydon formerly lived in Danville, but left some years ago to accept a position with the Newport News Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company. He was later promoted to the Brocklyn navy yards, where he is now engaged as a naval architect. He is the son of Mr. Robert Brydon, of Dánville, clerk of the City Council, a well known druggist, who was at one time president of the State Board of Pharmacy. The's family have many connections in Virginia and Maryland.

Miss Mattle Haw Cross and Mr. George Edward Roberts were married in the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Charles F. Cross, of Highland Park, last Wednesday evening at 620 o'clock, the Rev. Jere Witherspoon, of Grace Street Presbyterian Church, performing the ceremony. The house was beautifully and tastefully arranged for the wedding, the whole lower floor and stairway being canvased in white. Sprays of white illac intertwined with green, festooned the doorways and banked the mantels. Shaded candelabra gave a soft and beautiful illumination.

Three nieces and a nephew of the bride—Bessie Cross, Ellon Muscoe Garnett,

Miss Mary Brander, the maid of honor, was attired in white silk, with exquisite lace trimmings. Her flowers were Bridesmaid roses.

Little Martha Cross, a charming maiden of three years, bore the wedding ring on a white satin cushion. The bride entered with her brother, Mr. Charles F. Cross, the groom awalting her at the altar with his best man, Mr. James Hoge Tyler. She wore a going-away gown of durk blue Panama cloth, a blue hat, and carried Bride roses. The wedding march was followed by "Hearts and Flowers," played softly during the ceremony by Mr. Charles Garnett.

After the ceremony, boxes of wedding cake were distributed by Miss Emily Cross and Miss Eliss Garnett. The grouping around the bride at the altar of her first cousins, Misses Elizabeth, Mary Overton, Nannie, Virginia and Mary Austin Haw and Miss Mary Roy Garnett, made a beautiful tableau during the ceremony. ### A PICTURE OF DEATH.

The following lines are from "The Glaour," a Turkish tale. Other selections from Byron, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch have already been printed in this series.

E who hath bent him o'er the dead Ere the first day of death is fled,
The first dark day of nothingness, The first dark day of nothingness, The last of danger and distress, (Before Decay's effacing fingers Have swept the lines where beauty lingers); And marked the mild angelic air, The rapture of repose, that's there, The fixed yet tender traits that streak The languor of the placid cheek, And,-but for that sad shrouded eye, That fires not, wins not, weeps not now, And but for that chill, changeless brow, Where cold Obstruction's apathy Appalls the gazing mourner's heart, As if to him it could impart The doom he dreads, yet dwells upon; Yes, but for these, and these alone, Some moments, ay, one treacherous hour, He still might doubt the tyrant's power; So fair, so calm, so softly sealed, The first, last look by death revealed! Such is the aspect of this shore; 'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more! So coldly sweet, so deadly fair, We start, for soul is wanting there. Hers is the loveliness in death, That parts not quite with parting breath; But beauty with that fearful bloom, That hue which haunts it to the tomb, Expression's last receding ray, A gilded halo hovering round decay, The farewell beam of Feeling past away; Spark of that flame, perchance of heavenly birth, Which gleams, but warms no more its cherished earth!

No. 3070—The daintiest little dresses imaginable that may be used for dancing school or parties, are made of white China silk with trimming bands and yokes of self fabric, embroidered in heavy silks. Such a frock is shown here. A fitted body lining is faced with material to a square yoke depth back and front. It is cut out slightly at the neck. Full waist portions are tucked at the upper edge and attached to the foundation to outline the yoke. Fancy bands of material finish the yoke in an odd manner. Tucks in the waist are stitched down a short distance and provide fullness that blouses all around over a sash of pale blue slobon.

As illustrated the sleeves are short puffs, completed with—full, embroidered ruffles. Made in this way the dress could be worn with a lace guimp. If desired, the waist may be made high neck and finished with a shallow collar. The sleeves are also given full length in bishop style.

A heavy landslide fell from the mountain side just after a train had passed, and but a few minutes before the next train was due. The young girl, standing in front of her home, was watching the first train go by, when her attention was attracted by the roar and rattle of the landslide, and noticed that the huge mass of earth and rock completely covered the tracks. Realizing that from its position, just around a sharp curve, the engineer of the passenger train, which she could see approaching in the distance, would be unable to see the obstruction until he was almost into it, the quick-witted gir ran into the house, and securing a rail-road torpedo, which had been left there by a trainman, ran with all her speed to the tracks and placed the torpedo of the rail. She also secured a piece of red cloth to use as a danger signal.

Just after passing through the tunnel, close to Mud Cut, Engineer G. W. Brown heard the report of a torpedo, Acting on the signal, he at once began to slow down, and, looking out, observed a young girl standing by the track vigorously waving a red cloth. He quickly applied the brakes and brought his train to a standstill, within ten feet of the obstruction. As the engineer and passengers quickly jumped to the ground, the young girl approached and modestly told her story of how the landslide had occurred and her fear that the train would run into it if not warned. As she talked the passengers and train crew gathered about her and heartly thanked her for her bravery and presence of mind, which had undountedly averted a catastrophe and probably saved many of them from death. A collection was quickly taken up, and the child was made the recipient of quite a handsome purse.

Among those on board the train was W. H. Lamber, of Richmond, Va.
